We post the most up-to-date 1:1

Dear colleague,

Welcome to the September edition of the AALF newsletter!

This month we have an editorial by Bruce Dixon, President of AALF, who writes about the effects of low expectations in 1:1 programs. We also have an editorial by Susan Einhorn, Executive Director of AALF, who discusses how our choices in technology shape our behavior. This issue also includes an article by Nick Sauers, Leadership Training Coordinator of the Center for the Advanced Study of Technology Leadership in Education (CASTLE) at the University of Kentucky who shares findings from his study on the technology competencies of 1:1 vs non-1:1 teachers. We also have an article discussing the history and meaning of International Dot Day, as well as a look back on a popular article from our May, 2011 issue by author Pamela Livingston on a 1:1 survey she conducted. You'll also find an announcement concerning a new e-book by Will Richardson published by TED Books. As well, you'll find some of our regular features: Survey Says and Share Your Expertise.

All of the links for the books mentioned in this edition of the newsletter can be found in the Research and Resources page of our website here.

Click on the link at the end of each article to read it in its entirety on our website. You can comment or add your stories to any of these articles. We would love to hear from you!

Enjoy!

THE SCOURGE OF LOW EXPECTATIONS

In this editorial, Bruce Dixon, President of the Anytime Anywhere Learning Foundation, discusses how losing sight of the early lessons of 1:1 can result in low expectations in contemporary 1:1 programs. Click here to read more of Bruce's thoughts on low expectations and 1:1

ARE YOU SNACKING, DINING, OR COOKING?

In this editorial, Susan Einhorn, Executive Director of the Anytime Anywhere Learning Foundation, considers how the form, strengths, and limitations inherent in various technologies may create some subtle and unintended shifts in our behavior. In light of this, how can we best empower learners? Click here to read more about Susan's thoughts on programming, choice and ways of thinking.

1:1 TEACHERS VS THEIR NON 1:1 PEERS: A LOOK INTO TECHNOLOGICAL COMPETENCIES

In this article, Nick Sauers, the Leadership Training Coordinator of the Center for the Advanced Study of Technology Leadership in Education (CASTLE) at the University of Kentucky, discusses some findings from his research on the technological competencies of 1:1 vs. non 1:1 teachers in 40 Midwestern schools. Click here to read more about Nick's research.

1:1 THE NEXT GENERATION-- RE-VISITED

We'd like to re-visit an article by Nick Sauer's fellow 1 to 1 Schools.net contributor, Pamela Livingston. In this article from our May, 2011 issue, Pamela Livingston sets out to get a quick snapshot of what kind of thinking exists now around 1:1, approximately a generation after the first laptop school, Pamela ran a short survey, receiving responses from 19 schools or districts. Public, independent, parochial, and international schools weighed in on what 1:1 means in their institution. Click here to view the findings of Pamela's survey.

"The Dot" & International Dot Day

September 15th marked the 2nd inaugural International Dot Day. Inspired by New York Times best-selling author/illustrator Peter H. Reynolds' The Dot, Dot Day was created to get students away from the mundane testing culture pervading schools, and allow them to create some art. Click here to learn more about Dot Day and the activities that are continuing around the globe!

LEARNING FROM OTHERS-- IDEAS WORTH REPEATING

This month's quote comes from author Michael Fullan's new book Stratosphere:

"The integration of technology and pedagogy to maximize learning must meet four criteria. It must be irresistibly engaging; elegantly efficient (challenging but easy to use); technologically ubiquitous; and steeped in real-life problem solving."

To order the book, please click here.
